Angela Eilrich Recipient of First Nation Meyer Award

– First Bank Kansas Executive Vice President Honored at DCI Conference –

HUTCHINSON, KS, October 10, 2014 – DCI, developer of the award-winning iCore360® core banking software and related technologies for community banks, announced the first recipient of the Nation Meyer Innovative Banker Award, Angela Eilrich, vice president and COO of First Bank Kansas, Salina, presented to her at DCI's 2014 Annual Conference in September.

The Nation Meyer Innovative Banker Award was established in 2014, during DCI's 50th anniversary, to honor DCI's founder Nation Meyer, and his legacy of innovative vision...a vision of shared data processing for banks, which he turned into a reality when he founded DCI with three other Kansas bankers in 1963.

The annual award recognizes a DCI banker for their achievement or contribution toward the betterment of their bank, community, DCI, iCore360® or the industry as a whole.

Eilrich was selected from several nominations submitted by fellow DCI bankers and received a handblown glass and engraved metal award and $1,000 cash.

Mrs. Eilrich was nominated for the award by John Sturd, Arkansas City Community President, noting that she was instrumental in making First Bank Kansas the first to successfully run a live week-long disaster event scenario, using live bank data and transactions, with no interruption to customers or normal bank operations.

John H. Jones, DCI president and CEO, said, "Angela is the perfect recipient for our first Nation Meyer award. She has always been willing to help DCI test out new programs and procedures. She is a very active user group member and embodies the word innovative, and we're thrilled to present her with the first Nation Meyer Innovative Banker Award."
